

The FCC should understand safety over convenience. Allowing the use of cell phones in aircraft is ridiculous. In the event of an emergency trying to control passengers while they are talking on the phone would be impossible. It would also be much easier for terrorists to communicate with one another.

As a flight attendant, I would also like to point out that I know first hand that cell phones interfere with the GPS. The FCC has NO proof that cell phones do not interfere.

Please take this message into consideration. Thank you.
